Gaga for Bennett: Music legends reunite ‘One Last Time’

By Sarah Passingham

TV Media

When a musical talent like Tony Bennett hits his milestone 95th birthday, it’s cause for celebration. To mark the occasion, Bennett teamed up with frequent collaborator Lady Gaga (“A Star Is Born” 2018) for two sold-out live concerts in Manhattan’s Radio City Music Hall this past August. Touted as the legendary jazz singer’s final public performances, these two concerts have now been cut into a gritty special.

“One Last Time: An Evening With Tony Bennett and Lady Gaga,” airs Sunday, Nov. 28, on CBS. “One Last Time” features the pair performing jazz standards that have been a part of Bennett’s repertoire for decades. In a news release, CBS announced the set list of the special, noting that Gaga and Bennett will each perform four solo songs, including a Gaga rendition of “Lucky Be a Lady” and Bennett singing the Bar Harbor jazz staple “Fly Me to the Moon.”

In a preview of “One Last Time” released by CBS this month, the pair sing the first of the three duets featured in the special, “The Lady Is a Tramp.” They also team up for “Cheek to Cheek,” released by CBS this month, the pair singing the first of the three duets featured in the special, “The Lady Is a Tramp.” They also team up for “Cheek to Cheek,” released by CBS this month.

WHAT’S NEW ON NETFLIX

“Money Heist” - Season 5, Vol. 2

The heist must go on as the second volume of “Money Heist’s” fifth season releases Friday, Dec. 3, on Netflix. With the first five-hour-long episodes of the season having been released in September of this year, fans of the Spanish-language crime drama have been anxiously awaiting the rest of the series’ final season. The first half of Season 5 left the crew locked inside a Spanish bank for over 100 hours, with the situation looking more and more dire. Now, what should have been a robbery (albeit one of the greatest heists in history) is turning into an all-out war as the group fights to get out alive. Created and written by Álex Pina (“Los Hijos de Paco”), this season is directed by Jesús Colmenar (“Vis a vis”) and Koldo Serra (“The Backwoods,” 2006). Álvaro Morte (“Mirage,” 2018), Itziar Ituño (“Flowers,” 2014), Úrsula Corberó (“Snake Eyes: G.I. Joe Origins,” 2021), Pedro Capitán (“El Clan”), Esther Acebo (“Growing Pains,” 2018), Mina Tander (“Queen of the South”), and Parker Posey (“Superman Returns”) also star.

“Harlem” - Season 1

Tap into some big city dreams with Prime’s new coming-of-age comedy “Harlem,” premiering Friday, Dec. 3, on the streaming platform. Freshly graduated from college and looking to find themselves while pursuing their dream careers, best friends Camille (Meagan Good), “Shazam!” (2019), Tye (Jerrie Johnson, “Tosha”), and Angie (Ghoniqua Shandall, “The Obituary of Tunde Johnson,” 2019) aren’t about to let anything get in the way of their goals. With four distinctly different personalities and career paths, the show follows their lives as they grow together and chase their dreams in the Big Apple. From “First Dates Club” and “Girl’s Trip” (2017) creator Tracy Oliver, this fun new series is directed by Malcolm D. Lee (“Space Jam: A New Legacy,” 2021), Stacey Muhammed (“Queen Sugar” and Neema Barnette (“Goliath”), Toby Stepney (“The Obituary of Tunde Johnson,” 2019) and co-written by Oliver and Matt Sazama and Burk Sharpless (both of “The Man in the High Castle”), Jimmi Simpson (“Date Night,” 2010), Joseph Mawle (“Game of Thrones”) and Robin McLeavy (“Tosha”).

Monarch to mogul: Foy to star as Facebook COO in new series

By Michelle Rose
TV Media

Monarch to mogul: She’s fresh off a second Emmy win for playing Queen Elizabeth II in Netflix’s “The Crown,” but in an upcoming TV project, British actress Claire Foy will be focusing on a different kind of empire — the social media kind.

Foy is set to portray Facebook COO Sheryl Sandberg in the upcoming series “Doomsday Machine,” from production companies Anonymous Content (“Mr. Robot”) and wiip (“Mare of Easttown”). Penned by playwright/novelist Ayad Akhtar (“Homeland Elegies”), the scripted drama series is a TV adaptation of the bestselling book “An Ugly Truth: Inside Facebook’s Battle for Domination” by Pulitzer Prize-winning journalists Sheera Frankel and Cecilia Kang, who are both also on board as consultants and executive producers.

As Sandberg, Foy will play a central role in “Doomsday Machine,” which centers on the relationship between the COO and Facebook founder Mark Zuckerberg (a role uncast as of writing). The show will focus on a series of decisions made by the social media giant since 2016 and amid the rise of online disinformation.

But Facebook is none-too-happy about “Doomsday Machine” and its potential for generating more controversy: it hired Mathew Rosengart, the lawyer who helped Britney Spears fight against her conservatorship, to defend the company against any “grossly misleading characterization.”

Rosengart has already sent a letter to the series producers, warning them of possible legal action if the adaptation repeats any of the source material’s “false and defamatory statements, characterizations, and implications about Facebook and its leadership.”

This legal warning shot isn’t surprising given Zuckerberg’s dissatisfaction with the 2010 film “The Social Network,” and in light of Facebook’s attempts to reshape its image. The letter cited four key points of concern as potential legal traps, so it should be interesting to see how the final product looks once production on “Doomsday Machine” is completed.

Claire Foy to star in Facebook drama series “Doomsday Machine”

Cast in Order: NBC is officially reviving Dick Wolf’s original “Law & Order” series, the one that spawned such spinoffs as “Criminal Intent,” “Special Victims Unit,” “Trial by Jury” and more (but not “For the Defense,” which was canceled this summer before it even aired).

The network’s straight-to-series order was announced earlier this fall, and at that time few details were revealed other than the name of its showrunner (Rick Eid, one of Wolf’s frequent collaborators).

We do know that the revival is being treated as the series’ 21st season rather than as a reboot or spinoff, and now “Burn Notice” star Jeffrey Donovan holds the distinction of being its first official cast member.

After seven seasons on the USA Network series, Donovan joins the Law & Order family as an NYPD detective in “Law & Order.” There’s also been talk of former series stars revisiting their characters.

Expect more casting news to come, but in a 2015 interview with the Hollywood Reporter — back when Wolf was looking to revive the show as a limited series — actor Sam Waterston had stated he was open to reprising his role as District Attorney Jack McCoy, saying, “I’d love it. Got to break the record.”

The record in question was “Gunsmoke’s” 20-year, 635-episode run; a run that made it the longest-running live-action prime-time series at the time.

“Law & Order” was only a season away from smashing that record when NBC abruptly canceled it in 2010 due to declining ratings and budget constraints. That said, another Wolf-produced show, “SVU,” successfully surpassed “Gunsmoke’s” run in 2019.

(h)all good: Just last month, journalist and talk show host Tamron Hall was making news of her own with the release of her debut novel, “As the Wicked Watch.” It’s being touted as the first in a new series of fictional crime stories, but Hall will also be exploring true crime stories, too, come January (Jan. 9, 2022, to be exact), when the new series “Someone They Knew… With Tamron Hall” debuts on Court TV.

Hall’s syndicated talk show is still going strong — in fact, “Tamron Hall” just scored a two-season renewal, which ensures it’ll be on the air through the 2023-24 season. Hall confirmed the renewal when she tweeted, “Tam Fam, we could not have done this without you!! We’ve been renewed for Season 4 + Season 5 #tamronhallshow.”

In August, ABC News took over production of the formerly Disney-produced syndicated show, which won a Daytime Emmy after launching in the fall of 2019. And it seems ABC continues to be pleased with the show’s performance and contributions to daytime television.

“Tamron Hall is a trusted and accomplished journalist and an outstanding talk show host,” ABC News president Kim Godwin said in an official statement. “She is a breath of fresh air in daytime, approaching every show and segment with her personal mix of curiosity and compassion. We are delighted to continue this collaboration with Tamron and her stellar team in presenting their distinctive brand of talk to our valued station partners, the TamFam and beyond.”

Shang Chi and the Legend of the Ten Rings (2021)
In ancient times, 10 mystical rings were discovered by a man named Xu Wenwu (Chiu-Wai Leung). As a result, he was granted immortality and unmatched power, which allowed him to become a conqueror and to create the Ten Rings organization. Searching for a village said to harbor mythical beasts, Wenwu comes across its guardian, Ying Li (Chen), and the two of them quickly fall in love, leaving Wenwu no choice but to flee the Ten Rings so the couple could raise their two children together. One of their alo-immortal children, Shang-Chi (Liu), eventually pursues a normal life in San Francisco, changes his name to Shaun and vows to keep his past a secret. But when the Ten Rings tracks him down, Shang-Chi must face his past — and his eternal future.

Malignant (2021)
After surviving a mysterious home invasion, Madison (Wal-lis) is consumed by violent visions of grisly murders, including one of her abusive husband, Derek (Abel). The horror worsens as Madison realizes her visions may not be in her mind at all, but realities fueled by a childhood incident involving her imaginary friend. With the help of her sister, Sydney (Hasson), Madison learns the truth behind her violent visions.

Saint Maud (2019)
Maud (Clark) is a palliative care nurse in charge of mind- ing terminally ill dancer Amanda (Ehle), who has Stage 4 lymphoma. When Amanda confesses to Maud that she fears death, the nurse encourages her to save her soul. But when Maud meets Amanda’s new companion, Carol (Frazer), she becomes convinced the woman will drag Amanda into eternal damnation.
