Travel buddies: Ramsay takes scenic route through Europe with celebrity pals

By Sarah Passingham
TV Media

Celebrity chef Gordon Ramsay (“Hell’s Kitchen”) has spent more than two decades of television appearances building his reputation as a prickly, potty-mouthed Brit. Naturally, he has expanded his TV hosting empire beyond the borders of food into travel, and this time he has brought two of his buddies along for the ride.

The new special “Gordon Ramsay’s Road Trip: European Vacation,” airing Monday, Dec. 13, on Fox, follows Ramsay and his companions — French service industry expert Fred Sirieix and Italian celebrity chef and TV personality Gino D’Acampo — as they take a road trip around Europe.

“Along the way, the three well-traveled hosts make some eventful stops in their respective homelands. D’Acampo shows Ramsay and Sirieix what Naples’ markets have to offer before they pack up for his friend’s vow renewal on the nearby island of Ischia. In France, Sirieix is responsible for hosting the very first oyster festival in the seaside town of Arcachon, and has brought along some help in the form of top chefs Ramsay and D’Acampo. Ramsay, meanwhile, who was born in Scotland, brings his two travel buddies with him to cook for the chief of Clan Ramsay — they also, of course, take part in Ceres’ Highland Games while there.

Fred Sirieix, Gordon Ramsay and Gino D’Acampo in “Gordon Ramsay’s Road Trip: European Vacation”

These three gregarious hosts each show off just how an eventful feast is done in three beautiful — very different — countries with some healthy competition between them. Each known for being big personalities in their own right, combined they make a team ripe for misadventure.

Sitting down on “The Jonathan Ross Show,” a late-night British TV staple, to discuss filming the series, host Ross wanted to know what Sirieix learned: “about food from these guys [Ramsay and D’Acampo], that you didn’t already [know].”

Sirieix responds that the two chefs have very different philosophies, explaining, “Gordon [Ramsay] is always faster, higher, bigger, and Gino [D’Acampo] is minimum effort, maximum satisfaction.”

Never one to hold back, Ramsay adds that D’Acampo is “lazy,” however it’s all clearly just friendly ribbing among close friends, competitors and travel comrades. And “close” may be an understatement, from what Ramsay revealed in that same “Jonathan Ross Show” interview.

After eviscerating D’Acampo for his lacklustre camper van driving skills along the Italian leg of their journey, Ramsay shared a story of the night he awoke to find the Italian chef cuddling him during an overnight stay in the vehicle. D’Acampo logically explains to the audience that he was “scared,” while Ross felt the need to ask the trio, “Have the three of you thought about relationship counseling?”

Ramsay is certainly no stranger to the world of culinary travel. In his National Geographic series “Gordon Ramsay: Uncharted,” the celebrity chef treks solo all over the world, met by guides in each locale, and getting his hands dirty while learning about unique regional cuisines and ingredients. He has explored high-altitude cooking in Peru’s beautiful Sacred Valley and received a lesson in harvesting taro root by foot in Hawaii, to name just a couple of his knowledge-expanding experiences.

In exchange for his one-of-a-kind experiences, the chef gives back with a lovely feast of thanks in each location, bringing his own style to a menu made with uniquely local ingredients. Often the most enjoyable part of the series is seeing the culinary authority try to get the knack of new (to him) methods and measures.

"The Witcher" - Season 2

After not-so-patiently waiting during this smash-hit series’ two-year break, fans of “The Witcher” can finally rejoice. The popular fantasy series returns to Netflix with its second season on Friday, Dec. 17. Based on the fantasy novels of the same name by Polish author Andrzej Sapkowski, “The Witcher” was largely popularized by the hit series of PC games, also bearing the same title. Spanning multiple storylines and timelines that weave together into an intricate and gripping tale, the series follows the quests of the infamous monster-hunting witcher, Geralt of Rivia (Henry Cavill, “Man of Steel,” 2013), his protégé and pseudo-daughter, Ciri (Freya Allan, “Wanderlust”), and the powerful witch Yennifer (“Gunpowder Milkshake,” 2021), pseudo-daughter, Ciri (Freya Allan, “Wanderlust”). Filming is underway of season two, with the series set to return in 2022. The second season is Geralt’s bard companion, the new original film premiering City Lights” (2021), starring Oscar Award winner, Meryl Streep. The film is directed by David Frankel (“The Devil Wears Prada,” 2006) and stars Meryl Streep as Miriam. The film follows Miriam, a woman who must come to terms with her past and make the difficult choice to separate from her son. The film also stars Steven Yeun (“The Walking Dead,” 2010), David Oyelowo (“The Water Man,” 2021), and Priyanka Chopra Jonas (“Isn’t It Romantic,” 2019). The film is set to release on December 17, 2021.

WHAT'S NEW ON PRIME

"With Love" (2021)

Cuddled up for a cozy holiday story when the new Prime original limited series “With Love” makes itself available to stream on the platform on Friday, Dec. 17. Siblings Lily (Ema- rauda Toubia, “Shadowhunters”) and Jorge (Mark Indelicato, “21 & Over,” 2013) also star in this cozy new Christmas flick.

WHAT'S NEW ON AMC+

"Firebite"

Vampires get a whole new kind of story in the brand-new Australian series “Firebite,” coming to AMC+ on Thursday, Dec. 16. The story follows two indigenous Australian hunters as they go on a journey through the southern Aussie desert to find the last surviving colony of vampires. In the series, British colonial powers sent over shipsloads of vampires to eradicate the remaining Indigenous populations. Unsuccessful, the vampires created their own civilizations underground in remote areas of the country’s vast outback. As the last remaining colony grows larger and hungrier, Tyson (Rob Collins, “Extraction,” 2020) and Shanika (Shantae Barnes-Cow- an, “Total Control”) lead the charge, attempting to do what countless others have failed to do: eradicate the remaining vampire population. Created, directed and written by Warwick Thornton (“Samson & Delilah,” 2009), the series also stars Callan Mulvey (“Batman v Superman: Dawn of Justice,” 2016), Thibul Net- tle (“Friendship Love and Loyalty,” 2016) and Yael Stone (“Orange is the New Black”).

"Mother/Android" (2021)

The new American science fiction thriller “Mother/Android” premieres Friday, Dec. 17, on Hulu. Ex- pectant mother Georgia (Chloé Grace Moretz, “Kick-Ass,” 2010) is days away from the birth of her first child with her boyfriend, Sam (Algee Smith, “Judas and the Black Messiah,” 2021). With their country at war and enemies at every turn, the couple is forced to make a harrow- ing escape to give their child a bet- ter life. Facing “No Man’s Land,” a stronghold held by a powerful up- rising of androids, Georgia and Sam are determined to do what it takes to make it to safety before her child is born. Written and directed by Mattson Tomlin (“Little Fish,” 2020), the film marks Tomlin’s directorial debut. Starring alongside Moretz and Smith in the film are Kate Avallone (“The Tender Bar,” 2021), Owen Burke (“Castle Rock”), Oscar Walshberg (“Manchester By the Sea,” 2016), Jared Reinfeldt (“Gossip Girl”), Steve M. Robertson (“Dexter: New Blood”), Raúl Castillo (“Army of the Dead,” 2021), Kiara Richardo (“The Society”) and Liam McNeill (“Manchester by the Sea,” 2016).

Round Two: ‘Squid Game’ creator looks ahead

By Michelle Rose
TV Media

Round Two: Sorry, Shonda Rhimes. The producer’s period drama, “Bridgerton,” used to be Netflix’s top-viewed series until “Squid Game” came along.

Within weeks of landing on the streamer, the Korean drama starring Lee Jung-jae (“Chief of Staff,” 2019), Park Hae-soo (“Prison Playbook”) and model Jung Hoyeon had already hooked in 111 million fans worldwide with its “win or die trying” twist on Korean children’s games. It’s now Netflix’s biggest series ever, and with that kind of viewership, you’d think a second season would be inevitable.

Creator Hwang Dong-hyuk (“The Fortress,” 2017) thinks so, too, despite telling Variety a few months back that it was “quite tiring just thinking about” another installment.

In a recent interview with The Hollywood Reporter, Hwang (through a translator) said, “I do have a basic storyline for Season 2 — it’s all in my head — and I am currently in the brainstorming stage. It will happen, someday, but as for when, I cannot tell you the details.”

A lot of people excitedly took that as confirmation of a Season 2, but Netflix responded by saying: “A second season is in discussions but not confirmed yet.”

Despite the lack of an official confirmation, fans have been looking for any signs of more “Squid Game” to come, and they were encouraged that the thriller is being put forward as an awards contender in the Drama Series category rather than as a limited series.

And if there is a Season 2 to come, what storylines could we expect to see?

Hwang previously talked about the possibility of sharing the backstories for secondary characters like the Front Man (Gong Yoo, “Train to Busan,” 2016), but for now, the creator would only tease this general idea: “What I can say is that Gi-hun [Lee’s character] is going to be back, and he will do something for the world.”

Married to the Mob: Lena Dunham is graduating from “Girls” to scorned mobster wives.

It seems HBO is developing a new limited series based on the podcast “Mob Queens,” which centers on the wife of a New York crime boss. To bring the story to life, the network has decided to team up with Dunham, author Dennis Lehane (“The Outsider”) and British actress Ruth Wilson (“The Affair”).

In addition to her duties as executive producer, Wilson will play the role of Anna Genovese, the second wife of crime boss Vito Genovese. A fixture in the drag bars of Greenwich Village during the 1930s, Genovese is even more famous for describing her husband’s illegal dealings during their divorce hearings.

The drama will be written and executive produced by Dunham and Lehane, with Dunham also set to direct. This team-up isn’t so random, since all three have existing relationships with HBO.

Lehane, who is also working on adapting “In The Company of Men” for Apple TV+, previously worked on the HBO series “Boardwalk Empire” and “The Wire.” Wilson, meanwhile, stars in the BBC/HBO co-production “His Dark Materials,” which has been renewed for a third season, and she’s also led the cast of the HBO-produced TV movie “Oslo.”

As for Dunham, she created and starred in the aforementioned “Girls,” but she’s also behind the limited series “Camping” and HBO Max’s “Generation.” She also directed the pilot for “Industry.”

Dunham launched her production company, Good Thing Going, after landing an exclusive first-look deal with HBO back in 2019.

Back to ‘La Brea’: Far from a ratings sinkhole, NBC’s disaster drama “La Brea” has proven to be a solid performer since its debut earlier this fall. As a reward for pulling in good ratings, NBC has decided to renew the freshman series for a second season.

That makes “La Brea” the first rookie of the 2021-22 broadcast season to score a renewal. The No. 1 fall show for viewers aged 18 to 49, it pulls in an average of roughly 7.9 million viewers per episode (including seven-day delayed viewing numbers).

At a recent event, Susan Rovner, chairman of entertainment content at NBCUniversal Television, told reporters, “This was a big swing that captured audiences’ attention, and we’re excited to let fans know there’s more to come in season 2.”

The NBC series, which has been described as “Lost” meets “Land of the Lost,” centers on a family that has been torn apart by the appearance of a massive sinkhole in Los Angeles. After being sucked through a time rift and into a primordial world, the displaced Angelenos must work together in order to survive and find a way back home.

While “La Brea” has been performing well on Peacock, the NBC series has also benefited from a huge marketing push that began during the Summer Olympics. Judging from the ratings and now the renewal, NBC’s marketing support has clearly paid off.

NEW ON VIDEO

Venom: Let There Be Carnage
After Eddie Brock’s (Hardy) return to journalism following the events of the first film, “Venom” (2018), he remains bonded with Venom (also Hardy) and the pair prowl San Francisco in search of criminals to kill. Brock is soon contacted by Det. Patrick Mulligan (Graham) to speak to serial killer Cletus Kasady (Harrelson) and find the location of his victim’s bodies before being executed for his crimes. After locating the bodies, Brock is invited to attend Kasady’s execution. But when Venom is provoked into attacking Kasady and Kasady bites Brock’s hand, the criminal ingests part of the symbiote, which blocks the execution. The new, red symbiote presents itself as Carnage, and the pair begin wreaking havoc on San Francisco.

The Card Counter
Touring, card-counting gambler William Tell (Isaac) uses gambling as a way to numb the memories of his time as a U.S. Army torturer in Abu Ghraib. But after a chance encounter with Cirk Baufort (Sheridan), the son of another soldier from Abu Ghraib, in Atlantic City, a series of events is set in motion that leads Tell to relive the horrors of his past and choose his fate once again.

The Mitchells vs. the Machines
On the eve of her departure to film school, aspiring filmmaker Katie Mitchell (Jacobson) gets an argument with her technology-averse father, Rick (McBride), which leads to the accidental breaking of Katie’s laptop. Fearing the alteration will lead to a breakdown in their relationship, Rick enlists Katie’s mom (Rudolph), her brother (Rhonda) and the family dog (Doug the Pug) to drive Katie across the country to school. However, while at a roadside stop in Kansas, the Mitchell family is attacked by alien robots on a mission. With the fate of human life on earth in their hands, the reluctant Mitchell family sets out to save the world.

THE CONNECTION WITH NEWSPAPER MEDIA

No matter how consumers receive their newspapers – whether in print or online, on smartphones or tablets – readers rely on newspaper media for their local news, advertising and other information. In today’s opt-out world, consumers opt in to newspapers.

More than 160 million U.S. adults read a print or digital newspaper each week.

More than 100 million adults visited a newspaper website in the past month.

Readers spent nearly $10 billion to buy newspapers last year, while advertisers invested $24 billion.

Newspapers are the #1 source of local news & information in 11 of 16 major news topics.

54% of newspaper media consumers use two or more platforms to access their newspaper content.

In the past month, 79% of all U.S. adults say they’ve taken actions based on newspaper advertising, and 66% of newspaper users acted on a newspaper digital ad.

Consumers rate newspapers as the media:

- With the most trusted and believable ads
- Most valuable in planning shopping
- Preferred for receiving advertising info
